DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-24 are have been examined.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 6,189,146 to Pradyumna K. Misra in view of 5,765,152 to John S. Erikson, and 6,269,343 to Matthew G. Pallakoff.
4. As for claims 1-24 Misra does clearly teach an apparatus comprising;
Claims 1, 10, 17; a repository for storing a volume license agreement (See Misra column 6, lines 50-68 and column 7, lines 1-11);
Claims 1, 10, 7; a repository for maintaining a purchase history (See Misra tables 3 and 4, column 9, lines 29-61, and column 4, lines 15-30);
Claims 1, 10; a purchase generator (See Misra figures 3 and 4, column 2, lines 32-61).
Claim 2; a clearinghouse, the clearinghouse being remotely connected to the pricing generator over a communications network (See Misra figures 1 and 3, column 3, lines 59-68, and column 4, lines 1-13).
Claims 24, 3; the communications network is the Internet (See Misra column 4, lines 1-21).
Claim 4; the clearinghouse is further remotely connected to at least one of a plurality of publishers, the publishers periodically transmitting a new volume licensing agreement to the clearinghouse (See Misra column 2, lines 47-68).

Art Unit: 3621

Claim 5; the clearinghouse is further remotely connected to at least one of a plurality of distributors, the distributors periodically transmitting a new volume licensing agreement to the clearinghouse (See Misra column 2, lines 47-68).

Claim 6; purchase history is updated to reflect the transacted purchase (See Misra tables 3 and 4, column 4, lines 15-30, and column 9, lines 29-61).

Claim 9; an electronic distribution mechanism to automatically install the purchased product (See Misra column 6, lines 20-45 and column 8, lines 35-52).

Claim 13; include instructions to extract the volume license agreement from a remote clearinghouse (See Misra column 4, lines 49-68).

Claim 14; storing instructions further include extracting updated information about the products license under the volume licensing agreement (See Misra column 11, lines 25-45 and column 15, lines 19-36).

Claim 19; recording a history of purchases includes recording a point value associated with the purchase in accordance with the volume license agreement (See Misra column 2, lines 22-47 and column 4, lines 1-42).

Misra fails to teach the following features which are thought by Pallakoff and Erikson.

Claim 1; a pricing generator to generate a purchase price for the product in accordance with the volume license agreement and the purchase history (See Pallakoff column 7, lines 15-59).

Claims 7, 15; a rules engine containing a set of rules for determining a discount step (See Pallakoff column 7, lines 15-59).

Claims 8, 16, 21, 23; the rules engine further contains a set of rules for determining a discount step for the product in accordance with a profile of the user (See Pallakoff column 7, lines 15-59 or Erikson column 19, lines 45-60).

Claim 1; the purchase price is generated in response to a purchaser request (See Pallakoff column 7, lines 30-59).

Claims 11, 12; communicating the purchase price to the user in a visual display (See Pallakoff column 4, lines 42-63).

Art Unit: 3621

Claims 18, 22; communicating the approval by the user to purchase in a response to the visual display (See Pallakoff column 7, lines 5-30).

Furthermore, Misra does not clearly teach a method of pricing of the digital content being licensed, distributed and managed through its system. Even though Misra eludes to the collection of purchase history but Misra is not clear about the purpose of this data being used for eventual pricing of the digital content to be delivered through the system. However, it is well known within the art that volume purchase is a well established business practice. The notion of a customer's repeated volume purchase of a certain goods or services is well known. At the same time a user of this goods or services by increasing its volume has a better chance of getting a lower price for the goods or services. These are all established practices that have been conducted manually for many years (See applicants disclosure page 2, paragraph 3 and page 3, paragraph 1 and 2). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have added a well-known practice of volume discount pricing method in conjunction with a past buying behavior method to a license management system. Since it has been held that broadly providing a mechanical or automatic means to replace manual activity which has accomplished the same result involves only routine skill in the art. In re Vernner, 120 USPQ 192. This combination would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art for greater efficiency and economy in the management of licensing and pricing of volume discounted goods or services.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure U.S. Patent to:

Blaine Garst, 6,188,995; Method and Apparatus for Enforcing Software Licenses.

Gordon E. Larose, 6,108,420; Method and System for Networked Installation of Uniquely Customized, Authenticable, and Traceable Software Application.

Gary Shkedy, 6,260,024; Method and Apparatus for Facilitating Buyer-Driven Purchase Order on a Commercial Network System.

Art Unit: 3621

James W. O'Toole, 6,279,112; Controlled Transfer of Information in Computer Networks.

Richard V. Halbert, 6,101,484; Dynamic Market Equilibrium Management System, Process and Article of Manufacture.

Edgar Down, 6,226,618; Electronic Content delivery system.

Utility of volume discount and progressive lowering of the price of goods or services is a well known within the art. The use of this method of bulk buying and volume discount is a known practice and has been anticipated. To utilize this method in an automated manner does not render it patentable.
